Leadership Importance

Leadership is everywhere. It is found in clubs such as NEHS around the globe, in our governments, at every workplace and even within friends and family. While it may often look like money or power, it is simply the ability to influence and empower individuals towards a common goal.

But, one may ask, why does it matter? Good leadership brings vision, productivity, and moral to the people it serves. It builds others up, helps them recognize their strengths, and inspires them to be better.

As such, a recognized position, such as "president", is not a requisite for being a leader. Think about it -- do you know someone, maybe a close friend or even a popular classmate that seems to be able to influence those around them? That person is a leader.

Accordingly, leadership can be dangerous if misused. Influence can lead to manipulation and control, or could advocate for the wrong goals. We see this in many corrupt governments around the world today.

However, if used wisely, leadership enables those around it to become better versions of themselves, boosts organizations, and improves our world.

Leadership is powerful, and extremely important. If you are a leader, even just by example, be wise. It is a potent weapon. If you're not, become one. Become the one who gently steers others towards their best self.

Remember, lead others to good.

Easter

Easter is a joyful celebration observed by many around the world, which is happening on April 20th this year. For Christians, it marks the resurrection of Jesus Christ, symbolizing hope, renewal, and new beginnings. The holiday follows Lent, a season of reflection, and includes Holy Week, with special days like Good Friday and Easter Sunday. It is a very spiritual and meaningful celebration in the Christianity.

Beyond its religious roots, Easter has become a fun and festive occasion for families and friends. Activities like decorating eggs, Easter egg hunts, and sharing meals bring people together to celebrate the arrival spring. With symbols like the Easter Bunny and colorful eggs representing new life, Easter is a wonderful opportunity to embrace joy, creativity, and connection with loved ones.

Echoes of Youth: A Literary Compilation

As this wonderful project is coming to an end, let's review the significance it carries individually as well as schoolwide. The objective of Echoes of Youth was to encourage and nurture the voice of our students through writing. On an individual level, this has fostered a deeper love for writing, increased creativity, and implanted a feeling of fulfillment. As we have received submissions from the PreK, Elementary, Middle, and High school students, this project has made us a more unified and multifaced community. Our perspectives have expanded with our appreciation for the written word, and we are better because of it. Thank you to all those who have submitted, and best of luck in your future literary endeavors!!

Class Trips 2025

La Guaira, Prague London, & Philadelphia

From Europe to the USA, ECA students have recently traveled across the globe, engaging in wholesome activities and gaining cultural appreciation. The freshman class explored a Venezuelan attraction, a historical museum located in La Guaira. The sophomores had the chance to visit Prague and participate in a worldwide school exchange for a week, doing community service, building international connections, and collaborating with other influential organizations. Daniela Vasquez (10th) says, "I enjoyed the opportunity I had to meet new people and grow even closer to my classmates." Finally, our soon-to-be seniors could choose to visit either London or Philadelphia in search of a university. While it was a pretty productive trip, they could also do some sightseeing. We are so grateful to have learned a little more about the world that we live in and the new memories that we've made.

Linda's Project

Linda Dagosto (11th grade), a member of the National Honor Society, did a valuable project to support the orphan children in Casa Hogar, Venezuela, in May. Some of the diligent members of NHS and NEHS will attend to this project and head out to the place with several support props to provide to the children. We will also teach English, read books, and spend time playing with them, including face painting. Doing so will be a great motivation and experience for them. Since our community volunteered for this last year, it will go even more smoothly. We will be able to support the children and create cheerful memories with them, and we will continue to do so in the future as the representation of the leadership of ECA.

Aladdin Musical

The 6th, 7th, and 8th-grade students from Acting had prepared for an impressive performance of the Aladdin Junior musical for the 8th, 9th, and 10th of April in the theater. They had gone through numerous practices to make their show an unforgettable adventure for both them and the audiences. We, our school, want to thank the students who were creative and dedicated to putting on a great show and Ms. Shorna and Mr. Merrick, who conducted the students to make this performance wonderful, as it was immensely magnificent with music, costumes, and performances. You've created cherished memories that have truly enriched our school's legacy and strengthened our community!
